1988 NATIONAL REUNION UP-DATE

OCTOBER 14, 15, AND 16

GREENVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA

W. FRANK CHASTAIN

During the last week in December Barbara and I met with David Chastain, our 1988 National Reunion Chairman, in Greenville, South Carolina to discuss our reunion plans. David has been working hard on location and events for next October.

We will meet at the Ramada Inn, 1314 S. Pleasantburg Drive, on state highway 291 west, just off I-85, a little south of Greenville. Ramada's telephone number is 803-277-3734.

Our Board meeting and banquet will be held at the Ramada and a Sunday lunch is being planned at Holly Springs Baptist Church in Pickens. The church is a short distance from the home and mill site of Rev. John Chastain, son of Pierre, Jr. Rev. John's grave is located on this property, and I know that all of you will want to visit this beautiful mountain land. Bring comfortable shoes for a short walk in the woods.

Waterfall and shoals at the mill site just across the road from the graves.

Chastains in and around Pickens are in need of donations to mark this grave with a granite monument. The monument will be inscribed with dates and names, and if enough money is raised, with a family history/lineage. As these cousins will be our reunion hosts, you may wish to send a donation to Rev. John Chastain Memorial Fund, c/o Mrs. Pauline Finley, 201 Bivens Street, Pickens, SC 29671.

See you in South Carolina.

rain made walking more difficult. As we moved lower the creek's sounds became louder and upon turning a bend we found an impressively large, wide, rocky waterfall. There was a tremendous sound of crashing water and the greenish light among trees, growing where no trees had grown in Reverend John's time, gave the area a timeless quality; however a recent picnic's remains erased our feeling.

Later, Victor showed us the site of the home of Edward Chastain, known as Ned, and John Chastain. A couple of log outbuildings yet stood. He said that reunions of that line [of Chastains] had met there. In the evening he showed us photographs from one such reunion.

Edward Chastain was the son on "Ten Shilling Bell" Reverend John Chastain who left the farm to his son John.

We thank Victor and Kitty and their niece, Mildred, for their interest, knowledge, and their gracious hospitality. It was an unexpected, extraordinary experience which we shall always remember.

GENTLEMAN BURGLAR, JAMES A. CHASTAIN

Submitted by George B. Creel

Advertiser and Mail

Montgomery, Alabama, 3 April 1881

The convict's career is closed. The burglar is buried. The policeman's pistol sent the swift shot that stayed his steps forever. That leaden messenger saved him. It saved him from the sleepless pursuit of society whose sacred retreats he invaded--saved him from the hands of the law whose precepts he despised and penalties he defied. His spirit stands in the presence of a Tribunal from which no escape is possible, and more terrible than the pistols of policemen, blacker than the grave and blasting as the breath of hell. His horrible crimes confront him. Which way will he fly? Over the high walls that surround him now, no convict has ever escaped. They are not the work of human hands.

Chastain, alias Sutton, seems to have made Montgomery his headquarters for many weeks. His business was burglary. Night after night he plied his occupation here and elsewhere. His success was surprising. No doubt his long practice had made him adept in his business. In the most silent hours of the night he engaged in devilry, crawled into the houses of honest people, the fall of his feet was soft, while the household lay asleep in their beds. While they rested from their honest labors, he plundered them of their property, despoiled the homes of those who had never harmed him. It is said by those who met him that he had the manners and appearance of a gentleman, to possess a personal magnetism that was calculated to disarm and invoke kindly sentiment. Perhaps he came of a good family, was tenderly raised, had parents who were once proud of their bright-eyed boy and thanked God for so goodly a gift. Certain it was that he had evidence of being well raised. He was genteel in attire, business man. He was fond of good and bad society and circulated freely in both. He became very fast and got into discreditable escapades, he being a Lothario, notwithstanding that he was married and the father of children. The wine cup, the brandy bottle, the whiskey jug, the beer mug, billiards, farobank tables, and fast women were his weaknesses. He lived high and had a good time with his fast friends and companions. He spent money lavishly. Some discrepancies and curious transactions caused his employers to suspect that all was not well. The office of Ely, Harvey & Richardson caught fire and there was suspicion that Chastaine [sic] was not ignorant of its origin.

Be that as it may, he left the city, and he being heard of at Hot Springs, Detective Pryde was sent after him by Chief of Police P. R. Athy. At Malvern, Texas Pryde came up with him, but Chastaine, seeing him, fled to the woods and managed to escape after a long and hard chase. His baggage was carried by the train to St. Louis, and it was kept shadowed until Chastaine sent for it, and the messenger was tracked to the hiding place of the fugitive.

He was brought back to Memphis, indicted, tried, convicted of robbing his employers, and was sent to the penitentiary for three years. His wife remained true to his fallen fortunes, and made every effort to secure his pardon, woman-like, believing that she could win him back from a bad life. With the help of Governor, now Senator, Isham G. Harris and other gentlemen who deeply sympathized with her in her troubles, the pardon of Chastaine was secured from prison.

On being released from prison he went to St. Louis and before long returned to his evil ways. He was arrested, convicted and sentenced to fifteen years on the charge of stealing an overcoat. On his way to the penitentiary he managed to escaped by leaping from the train and disappeared for a time.

When next heard of he was arrested in Kansas City while emerging from a dwelling with a large amount of silverware and other property. He was again tried, convicted and sentenced to Missouri State Penitentiary for twenty years. Sometime afterward, in 1880, he cleverly escaped from prison and was heard of no more until the affair at Montgomery.

From the Troy Enquirer

James A. Chastaine, the noted forger, burglar and convict who was killed in Montgomery on the 29th, was born in Lee county, Georgia in 1847, moved to Florida with his widowed mother in 1860, represented a wholesale firm in New York from 1867 to 1870, married a highly respected young lady in Florida in May 1870, conducted business as a dealer in general merchandise in Florida from 1871 to 1872, went to Memphis where he located, having been engaged as a clerk on a river steamer, and afterwards as book-keeper for a wholesale firm in that city. In 1874 he forged the name of the firm on a draft for $10,000. He was captured at Hot Springs, Arkansas, returned to Memphis, tried, convicted, and sentenced to ten years imprisonment in the Tennessee penitentiary. He escaped Above are Chastain names, and those of similar names, inscribed on the Viet Nam Memorial in Washington, DC.

The Memorial is a series of vertical slabs of polished black granite, standing edge to edge, arranged in a broad vee, their backs against earth, and their fronts, with top edges even, though of serially varying heights, having names of over 55,000 men who died in that terrible conflict. One walks a descending way beginning where slabs are about 2 feet high to a low point at vertex of the vee, where slabs are over 6 feet in height, then upward along slabs of gradually lesser height to about 2 feet again. Each slab is numbered, with those having a w being in the westward arm of the vee, and e, eastward. Number following is line number, counting from the top, in which the name is found.

Constitution Avenue at about 19th is where the Memorial is located, and even on a beautiful October day, as it was when we visited, the solemnity of the place and what it stands for is powerful.

about the Indians as they were supposed friendly and under control of the state.

John Chastain and two other young men built a cabin a few miles south of Thomasville. On a Saturday they traveled a short distance north to a settlement to spend the Sabbath. Upon their return they found their cabin had been looted. Everything of value had been taken including their guns. They were angry and started in pursuit of the marauders. By nightfall they came upon a camp of Indians.

Chastain and his friends waited until morning before entering the camp. While the Indians were at breakfast, they entered, and Chastain, who could speak Indian, asked about a horse that had strayed, pretending that it was the purpose of their search. Of course the Indians had not seen the horse; however Chastain and his friends looked about and saw their guns in possession of the braves.

They accepted the Indians offer to share breakfast. As they ate they watched their chance, and when opportunity was provided, made a rush and secured their weapons.

The Indians confessed to the theft, and returned everything stolen on the promise that the theft would not be reported to the governor who could deprive the Indians of bounty [in exchange for ceding land?]. Stolen goods were packed on the back of a horse, and a warrior accompanied Chastain and his companions on their homeward journey.

The jubilant party set out but did not allow for the treacherous nature of the savages. Before they had gone far they were ambushed. Two companions of Chastain were murdered. He escaped with only the loss of an index finger.

He made his way to Thomasville, and a party of irate settlers, armed for vengeance, started in pursuit; however the Indians escaped.

Upon report of the crime, the governor demanded appearance of the tribe at Tallahassee where John Chastain identified five who had beset him and his comrades. All were sentenced to death; one died in captivity, one escaped, and three were hanged. Trial and hanging took place in Thomasville. It was the first death penalty executed in Thomas County.

After his adventure with the Indians, Chastain lived in Thomasville; he was a carpenter and built some of the first houses erected in Thomasville. After his marriage, he continued to live in Thomasville, but later bought land nine miles north where he farmed until his death in 1851.

DUES NOTICE

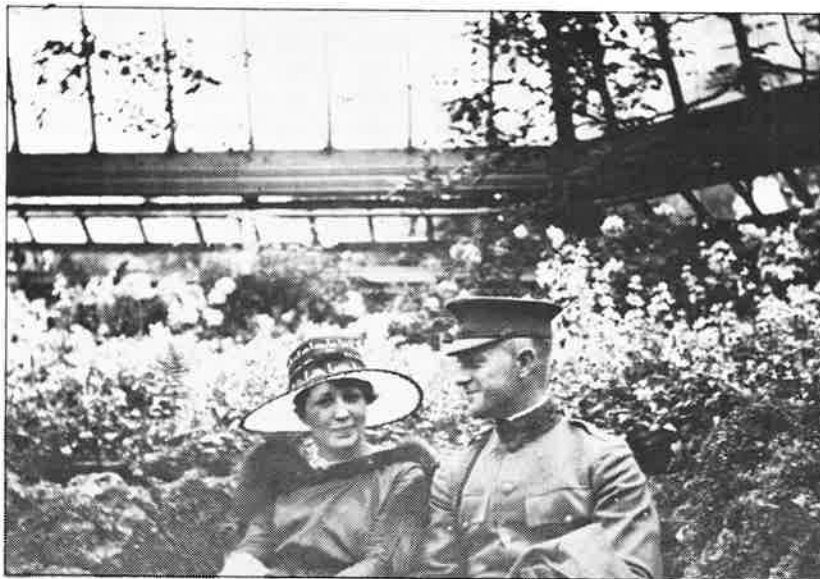

Violet W. Cook, our Membership Chairman, wishes to remind everyone that dues for 1988 should be paid now. Individual memberships are $10.00 and family memberships $12.00 per year. Life memberships are $100 and a bargain for Chastains as we are long lived.

[A letter to Troy M. Chastain, 30 Nov.1987]

I have corresponded with Elbin Cavender who told me of an issue of TCT, Vol. VI, No.4, October 1981, which contained information about my line of Chastaine. My grandfather is Col. Ben Hur Chastaine, from Elisha Chastaine branch.

My line is (1) Pierre Louis and Ann Soblet Chastaine; (2) Pierre Louis, Jr. and Mildred Archer Chastaine; (3) Abraham and Mary Robertson Chastaine; (4) Elisha and Martha Inman Chastaine; (5) Elisha, Jr. and Martha Anne Fowler Chastaine; (6) Ben Hur and Helena Patricia Hagerty Chastaine; (7) Mary Patricia Chastaine and James E. Butz; (8) Maralee Butz and Nicholas W. Carson; (9A) Ben Alexander Carson; (9B) Matthew James Carson.

Another extraordinarily handsome Chastaine. He has the smile of a Chastain male when looking at a pretty lady. Editor his widow, with children William G., Samuel, Thomas, Nancy, and Mary H., and their families, moved to Madison County, Arkansas, circa 1834. My g grandfather was Samuel.

His children spelled the surname in inconsistent fashion: Chastine, Chastead, Shasteen, Chasted, Shasted, and Shastid. It stabilized in the late 1800s as Shastid.

I will appreciate any clue as I am at a standstill.
